The settlement should end this waste of taxpayer money. Why discourage companies from being the best? That's what competition and the American way is all about. In 10 years if Linux is the top seller and everyone wants their product will the government try to beat them down too? What if Bill Gates said he'd had all this crap he wanted and took his marbles and went home... where would we be then? The government would be begging him to come back when the world came to a halt. Think about it. They have a right to try to make the best product and then to market it and if the public likes it and buys it so be it. Enough is enough.
